FROM THE PRESIDENT

This Could Be Your Year for Compass

When my children were young, one of our favorite books was Alexander and the Terrible, Horrible, No Good, Very Bad Day. The book tells the story of a young boy going through a day when everything goes wrong. As a result, throughout the day, he keeps thinking that he should move to Australia. At the end of this tough day, Alexander's mother tells him kindly that some days are like this, even in Australia. I've always loved the message of the book, because everyone faces challenging times. Sometimes it's a day; sometimes it's longer. What I've seen in the nonprofit sector is that we sometimes find ourselves in the middle of a year we weren't expecting. It's not even necessarily all bad. It may just be a lot to navigate at once. We often hear about the excitement, worry and surprises that can be part of a typical year for nonprofits.

As a nonprofit ourselves, we understand the unique challenges of the sector. Nonprofits have to manage, and be prepared for, the good and the bad. We know when donors change funding priorities, for instance, nonprofits must adjust to new financial realities. At the same time, reporting to a board of five, 10 or 20 people brings its own challenges as Executive Directors adjust to changing board chairs and board members. And even in the nonprofit sector, the competitive landscape can change. Nonprofits have to be ready to adapt their strategies when the external environment moves around them.

One inclination when things heat up is to hunker down and pull in. Another option is to find the support you need to weather the storm or take advantage of new opportunities. No matter what kind of year a nonprofit is having, our goal is to make every one of your years easier, so you can more easily serve the people who need you.

I am always excited this time of year to announce that our Client Application has just opened (see details below). Because we know that strong boards, diversified funding, and considered strategies are the foundations for any nonprofit, we offer pro bono consulting projects in Board Development, Funding Strategy, and Strategic Alignment. In addition, we offer projects around Partnerships & Collaborations and Strategic Marketing.

Every year is a good year to consider a Compass project. Sometimes when all the stars have aligned, nonprofits come to Compass to explore new ideas or test out items on a wish list. In more challenging times, nonprofits turn to Compass for an outside perspective on how to shore up operations and manage the year.
Through the bumps. With Compass, nonprofit leaders don't have to wait for the perfect year to do that very important project. Because truthfully, in the nonprofit sector, there is rarely a perfect year.

Although still in the middle of an unexpected year myself, the spring makes me optimistic. Maybe it's the graduations around the corner that have me thinking about new beginnings. While things may not be better in Australia, they may be better next year. Give us a call to talk about how we can help your nonprofit. We're here for you. Next year could be a great year to work with Compass.

Warmest regards, and happy spring!

Suzanne

This year, Compass is connecting 148 business professionals with 20 nonprofit organizations through our pro bono consulting projects in Greater Philadelphia. Like our nonprofit clients, Compass is a nonprofit that relies on contributions to ensure we can continue bringing business talent to the nonprofit sector to help individual nonprofits.

Every $1 donated to Compass provides $10 of services back to local nonprofits. Compass doesn't charge nonprofits for services, so we rely on funding from generous supporters. If you haven't donated to Compass during this 2018-19 project year, please donate now.
