FROM THE PRESIDENT & CEO

FINDING INSPIRATION

I can understand if people are feeling weighed down as this year comes to a close. With almost two years of a pandemic, political divisions, and social unrest, we've been living through challenging times. But once again, I find myself inspired at the end of the year with the many holidays being celebrated. The end of the year just feels different to me. Challenges don't go away, but the activities around the holidays and new year distract and recharge me.

This year, I'm appreciating that watching the animated Grinch still makes me laugh out loud. I'm appreciating the holiday movies and enjoying the wonderful lights and candles, which make me feel calm and uplifted. And a new year on the horizon always brings the possibility of better times.

As we finish 2021, I think back to the story of the Christmas Truce in 1914 during World War I. One winter night on the Western Front, German troops and British Expeditionary Forces began singing songs. The next morning, on Christmas Day, the two sides left their trenches to meet in the middle to socialize and exchange gifts. During this unplanned, 24-hour truce, they interacted as people, connected by their humanity.

One thing I appreciate most about Compass is that we connect people. We bring together people whose lives wouldn't normally cross. Business professionals who volunteer with Compass come to know nonprofits and their leaders, the issues they address, and the people at the center of their work.

As we think about all the good being done in the world, year-end charitable giving ranks high on the list. There aren't a lot of ways to feel helpful during the pandemic, but we can give to those who are making a difference. Nonprofits have continued to support individuals, families, and communities during these past two years. End-of-year giving is a perfect way to show support for the nonprofits in our community that are doing hard work during these difficult times. I hope you'll consider giving to Compass, because we touch so many other nonprofits and as a result, so many lives. So far this year, 270 business professionals are volunteering their time on 54 Compass consulting projects for local nonprofits. In January, we will kick off another 39 projects with an additional 195 volunteers. Then we will launch our On Demand projects. These numbers are in addition to the nonprofit boards and leaders that we serve through other Compass programs. All told, we expect to serve more than 200 nonprofits across Compass with almost 1,000 volunteers in 2021-22. Now that's inspiring!

This year, more than 100 years after that unplanned truce in 1914, maybe we once again need a truce, but this time for longer than one day. There is much work to be done. Here's hoping that 2022 surprises and inspires us all.

Happy holidays and best wishes for the new year!

Suzanne

SORKIN CENTER AT COMPASS HAPPENINGS

Racial Equity Cohort

Our six-month DEI cohort for nonprofit CEOs/Executive Directors has reached the half-way point after doing individual and organizational assessments. Corporate Diversity, Equity, and Inclusion leaders are working with the cohort to guide them through the assessments and help them create actionable DEI plans for their organizations. Our next DEI cohort will convene in Spring 2022. For more information, contact Amy Cress.

Strategic Planning

Are you looking to create a new Strategic Plan or refresh your existing Plan? The Sorkin Center at Compass provides fee-based Strategic Planning consulting services. Our team brings a structured approach to guide a board and Executive Director through the process of jointly establishing measurable goals, setting priorities, aligning resources and staff, and creating action plans. The result is a clearly articulated strategy to enable a nonprofit to advance its mission more efficiently and effectively. Contact Wendy Gualtieri for more information or to schedule a call to discuss your organization's needs.

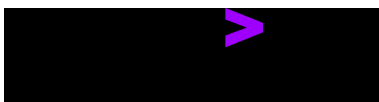

Board Training and Retreat Facilitation

The Sorkin Center team helps nonprofit boards become more effective through trainings and retreat facilitations. For Board Retreats, we work with a nonprofit's Executive Director and Board Chair on designing and planning the retreat, guiding and facilitating the event, and recording and summarizing discussions, decisions and next steps. Trainings on Governance, Nonprofit Finance, and Fundraising can be done as stand-alone events or as part of a board retreat. To learn more about our board training or retreat facilitation, contact Amy Cress.
